4 THE BAILIFF: Calling Calendar No. 1,
5 Civil No. 1CC 11-1-1871, Oahu Publications, Inc., versus 6 Neil Abercrombie for Plaintiff's motion for summary
7 judgment and for Defendant's motion for summary 8 judgment.

9 Appearances, please.

10 MR. THOMAS: Good morning, your Honor.
11 Robert Thomas for the plaintiff, the Star-Advertiser, 12 and with me at counsel table is Diane D. Hastert. And,
13 also, for the record, your Honor, I'd like to introduce 14 Mr. Frank Bridgewater, who is the editor of the 15 Star-Advertiser, who is present in the courtroom today.

16 THE COURT: Good morning.

17 MR. THOMAS: Good morning, your Honor.

18 MS. AINA: Good morning, your Honor.
19 Deputy Attorney General Charleen Aina for the Governor.

20 THE COURT: Good morning.

21 MS. AINA: Good morning.

22 THE COURT: You know, we'll go with the 23 party that filed first, and that would be Mr. Thomas.

24 MR. THOMAS: Yes, your Honor. Thank you.

25 MS. AINA: Judge Sakamoto, if I may --

1 THE COURT: Yes.

2 MS. AINA: -- before the plaintiffs argue 3 the motion for summary judgment, this morning we 4 received a copy of a non-hearing motion from the 5 plaintiff asking that a portion of the defendant's reply 6 memo be struck. Before we proceed to the argument on 7 the merits, may we understand how the Court would 8 proceed? Should we argue the -- all of the provisions 9 of the reply memo, or given the pendency of the motion
10 to strike that section is the Court going to say that no 11 argument should be had, and we would continue dependent 12 upon the disposition of the non-hearing motion?

13 THE COURT: I think you should assume and 14 the Court is prepared to rule on all issues brought 15 before it.

16 MS. AINA: I'm sorry?

17 THE COURT: The Court is going to rule on 18 all issues brought before it.

19 MS. AINA: This morning?

20 THE COURT: Yes.

21 MS. AINA: Okay. Thank you.

22 MR. THOMAS: We're prepared to argue that 23 as well, your Honor.

24 Your Honor, 16 years of routine public 25 disclosure by two governors and two chief justices of

1 names of lawyers honored with one of the covenant spots
2 on the JSC list shows one thing, if nothing else, that 3 the process has not been frustrated. And this case 4 is -- presents a legal question of statutory 5 interpretation; namely, under HRS 92F-13(3) whether JSC
6 lists are government records -- and this is the key 7 language -- that by their nature must be kept 8 confidential in order to avoid the frustration of a 9 legitimate government function. And they are not 10 because, as the Hawaii Supreme Court held in the Pray 11 case, the process cannot be frustrated by disclosure as 12 a matter of law because no reasonable lawyer really can 13 rely on confidentiality. And if that's the case, then 14 confidentiality really plays no part in anyone's 15 decision as a matter of law whether they can -- whether 16 they want to apply to the JSC hopefully in the chance of 17 them becoming -- being deemed qualified and put on the 18 JSC list.

19 So that's the simple way to take care of 20 this case, and that cuts off any questions about 21 anything else. As a matter of law, confidentiality is 22 not required and in fact cannot be guaranteed by anyone
23 under the Pray case because, as the Court held at 75
24 Hawaii, page 350, that Article VI does not expressly 25 mandate that the list remain confidential nor that they

1 be disclosed publicly, and there is no -- and this is 2 the key language -- there is no constitutional 3 obligation imposed on a governor or a chief justice
4 either to disclose or to keep them confidential. So 5 that really disposes of the question under Article VI of 6 the Constitution.

7 The second thing that Pray held is that 8 JS -- the JSC rules simply don't apply to the appointing 9 authorities, the governors and -- the governor and the 10 chief justice. They're not bound by those. And once 11 you get that part of it, your Honor, that really takes 12 care of a majority, in fact, the only remaining issue

13 that the Governor has raised. It's really sort of a 14 roundabout way of rearguing the Pray case.

15 And if that alone does not cut off sort 16 of the inquiry, then the argument then becomes one of 17 statutory interpretation. And since the Legislature did 18 not provide a list of records that must be kept 19 confidential and really did not define what it meant by 20 frustrate a government function, the Court simply goes 21 through the same rules of statutory construction that 22 the Court did, say, in the Kaapu case, the only other 23 case in which the Hawaii Supreme Court has addressed the 24 frustration exemption.

25 And they say first, if you don't have any

1 sort of express language -- we do -- we always do in 2 statutes -- you look at the legislative history. And if 3 you look at the legislative history and especially the 4 key portions where the Legislature says, well, we're not 5 going to put forth a list of what we think are 6 government records. We're going to leave it for the 7 courts to decide. But here's a list of nine things that 8 we think are close, and if it can be analogized to 9 those, then it may. And the list shows that the term 10 "frustrate" as used by the Legislature meant really to 11 defeat the government function. It's simply not a 12 question of making it a little better or little worse, 13 maybe. It's a question of actually breaking down the 14 process.

15 Second, you look at how courts -- the 16 Hawaii Supreme Court and the ICA has interpreted the 17 term or used the term "frustrate" in its cases over the 18 years both in common language and in other -- in 19 interpreting other statutes, and in those cases it's 20 pretty clear that they don't mean frustrate simply to be 21 sort of a little bit of here, little bit of there. It 22 really means potentially to thwart the entire process.

23 And then finally, and I think this is 24 probably the most important for this case, is you have 25 to look at the Legislature special rule of statutory

1 interpretation as applicable to UIPA, and that's broken 2 down into sort of three parts.

3 So, first, in order for the Governor to 4 prevail, he must show that it's absolutely clear that 5 the release of the JSC list will frustrate the judicial 6 appointment process. Argue, he can't do that.

7 Second, you take a look at the statute
8 itself and even the UIPA manual that's published by the 9 OIP and how that agency and how state agencies should 10 apply the UIPA, and it says that the UIPA must be 11 interpreted to promote open government. So that's -- 12 that's another rule of statutory interpretation that the 13 courts need to apply in UIPA cases, always keeping that 14 in mind. It's right there in the first part of UIPA, 15 92F I think 1 or 2, where it says the purpose of this is 16 to foster open government, to allow people to have 17 records, and then finally -- and this is sort of the key 18 one, your Honor -- that any doubt regarding disclosure 19 of a record should be resolved in favor of access. So 20 if it's even a close call, the rule says interpret the 21 statute to allow for public access.

22 So, ultimately, what the Governor asks
23 this Court to agree is with him that both Governors 24 Cayetano and Lingle and Chief Justices Moon and 25 Recktenwald, who -- who are the appointing authorities

1 for district judges, essentially frustrated the process
2 for 16 years, and I don't think we can get there.

3 You look at Governor Abercrombie's
4 contrary theory of frustrate, and I think it -- this is 5 the quote. He said could reasonably be expected to 6 interfere with the judicial selection process, and that 7 was in the reply memo. And ultimately there's three 8 reasons why that doesn't work.

9 First of all, it doesn't cite any 10 authority for it except two federal cases, one of which, 11 your Honor, when we tried to find it, we couldn't 12 because the citation was wrong. So it's actually not 13 1993 westlaw. When you -- you or your judicial clerk 14 look it up, it's actually 1995 westlaw, and that will 15 give you the federal case under Lin v. United States 16 (phonetic).

17 And those are questions under FOIA, the 18 federal difference, which is slightly different because 19 it involves what's called the deliberative process and 20 the law enforcement records which operate under what the 21 DOJ has classified as a significantly more relaxed 22 standard, first of all, of course, because the language
23 of FOIA is different. They don't use the term
24 "frustrate". And then Congress probably 10 or 15
25 years ago amended FOIA to make it significantly more

1 relaxed in favor of the government.

2 So those cases -- those federal cases
3 cited by the Governor in his reply brief simply don't 4 apply, so he has no authority that frustrate means could 5 reasonably be expected to interfere.

6 Secondly, goes to legislative history.
7 There really isn't any that helps us in his favor 8 explain what frustrate means in -- to only mean could 9 reasonably be expected to interfere with the judicial 10 selection process, and, in fact, if you look at the 11 Con-Con records, the only concern really that the 12 founders or the drafters of the 1978 constitutional 13 amendments that added this whole process was with 14 keeping the JSC insulated from political concerns.

15 And it was assumed that JSC lists would 16 become public at some point after their transmission to 17 either the governor or the chief justice, and the Pray
18 court cited it at page 344. A -- one of the standing 19 committee reports said it was felt the confidentiality 20 should be preserved, at least as to the name of initial 21 applicants and the deliberations, meaning of the JSC, 22 thereafter. The six names once they are selected would 23 be made public and the list then submitted to the 24 governor or chief justice. So we're talking about the 25 founding fathers and mothers of the 1978 Con-Con

1 envisioned release of the JSC lists well before the 2 stage where we are at now. In fact, once they were 3 transmitted to the governor.

4 And so, finally, the third reason why the 5 government -- Governor's theory of frustrate doesn't 6 hold water is even assuming that lawyers who did not -- 7 or did not apply to sufficient -- in sufficient 8 numbers -- and that's a fact that hasn't been 9 established -- the Governor can't make the required 10 causal link between confidentiality or lack thereof and 11 a hypothetical but reasonable lawyer who's considering 12 applying but then decides not to because, as our papers
13 point out, there's -- I mean, we could sit here all day 14 to try to figure out why lawyer -- a lawyer in private 15 practice and government service or on the judiciary 16 might not want to apply for an open position on the 17 bench. So the Governor's theory really cuts against the 18 strong public policy of disclosure and transparent 19 government that UIPA if it's clear on nothing else is 20 very clear on that.

21 And he's saying that secrecy -- I think 22 the basis of his whole theory is that secrecy might -- 23 and that's a strong word -- make the process better, 24 maybe. Then the records as a matter of law must be kept 25 confidential. And -- but we might say that this could

1 be true, your Honor, of nearly any situation involving 2 the government function, that operating behind closed 3 doors and in secret might be more efficient,
4 conceivably. It might make the function a little bit
5 better than it is. But, you know, democracy is not a -- 6 necessarily a pretty process, and UIPA -- the 7 Legislature or the people of Hawaii through their 8 Legislature and UIPA has made the choice of transparency 9 and disclosure over secrecy and closed doors.

10 So with that, I'm willing to or available
11 to answer any questions the Court might have, but we ask 12 that the Court enter three judgments. First, the 13 Star-Advertiser and in this case, more importantly, the 14 public is entitled to an order requiring Governor 15 Abercrombie to disclose the JSC list. Secondly, a 16 declaratory judgment that governors must release JSC

17 lists. And then, of course, finally, the one that flows 18 from that is that a judgment that the Governor failed to 19 timely disclose the list after the Star-Advertiser's 20 request.

21 THE COURT: Thank you.

22 MR. THOMAS: You're welcome, your Honor.
23 Thank you.

24 And I'll be -- if anything raised by -- 25 with respect to the late filed argument, I'll -- I can

1 come back and answer -- respond to those as need be,
2 your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Okay. Thanks.

4 MR. THOMAS: Thanks.

5 THE COURT: Good morning.

6 MS. AINA: May it please the Court.

7 Thank you.

8 The plaintiffs are relying on one
9 exception or are arguing that frustration is not 10 applicable to the Judicial Selection Commission -- 11 Commission's list. They have argued this consistently 12 both as to their motion for summary judgment as well as 13 in opposition to the Governor's motion for summary 14 judgment. But the Governor's basis, justification, and 15 reason -- reasons for withholding the Judicial Selection 16 Commission's nominations list include other exceptions.

17 The most compelling and clearest as far 18 as the Governor is concerned is that the lists are 19 confidential. What he receives from the Judicial 20 Selection Commission are -- is a confidential list.
21 That confidentiality pursuant to the Judicial Selection 22 Commission's rules doesn't transfer to him from the 23 Judicial Selection Commission. We acknowledge that.
24 But what the Legislature has done when it said that the 25 general rule is disclosure, except if a law restricts or

1 limits disclosure, what the Legislature has done is as a 2 matter of policy said in two places, 92F-13(4) and 3 92F-19(b). In those two places the Legislature has made 4 the policy call and said if an agency -- and the 5 Governor is an agency for purposes of 92F -- if an 6 agency receives a confidential document, then the agency 7 is obliged to maintain that confidentiality. And it's 8 very clear both from 92F-13(4) as well as 92-19(b).

9 In addition, the Governor disagrees with 10 the characterization of the frustration exception -- the 11 plaintiff's characterization of the frustration 12 exception. Much of the time -- much of the -- much of 13 the memorandum in opposition as well as the memorandum 14 in support of the motion for summary judgment by the 15 plaintiff focuses on causal connection, factual basis to 16 conclude that there's frustration, but the frustration
17 test is not a factual test per se. What it is is a 18 basis to anticipate for a reasonable -- a reasonable 19 expectation on the part of government that a clearly 20 established function could be interfered with, could be 21 undercut if disclosure is made.

22 And contrary to Plaintiff's argument this 23 morning, the Legislature -- the legislative history 24 makes very clear that the lists of nine things that the 25 Legislature cited to in its legislative history as to 1 what constitutes or -- frustration is simply a list of 2 examples, a non-exhaustive list of examples of what 3 could constitute frustration.

4 Here, if you will, frustration
5 incorporates the confidentiality of the Judicial 6 Selections Commission itself. In the last exemption in 7 that list of nine examples in the legislative history --
8 and we attached a copy of the Senate Standing Committee 9 report that includes that list -- encompasses this 10 confidentiality.

11 There's a degree of redundancy in 92F-13.
12 The redundancy appears in the frustration. It's 13 basically saying if a -- if an item's confidentiality is 14 lifted, such as, for instance, in the instance of 15 national security -- I mean, this being the example from 16 the federal -- FOIA -- the FOIA itself from which our 17 92F was fashioned -- that that in and of itself is 18 frustration.

19 But we're arguing that it's reasonable to 20 expect because the Constitutional Convention even 21 recognized when it -- when it conferred confidentiality
22 on the Judicial Selection Commission's deliberations, 23 they anticipated and they articulated the anticipation 24 that some lawyers may just not apply, that there was 25 concern in the community. They heard concerns from the 1 community that some lawyers may not apply.

2 THE COURT: What is the legitimate
3 government function we're talking about specifically?

4 MS. AINA: The legitimate government
5 function is the appointment of the judges and justices
6 to our appellate and circuit courts. The appointment
7 function is shared under the Constitution, Article VI,
8 Section 4 -- is shared -- I'm sorry, Article VI,
9 Section 3, is shared between the Judicial Selection 10 Commission which basically does all of the leg work for 11 the appointment process. It advertises vacancies. It 12 reviews applications. It can even under its rules 13 solicit applications. But it -- it is -- it vets the 14 general pool. And then under the Constitution and the 15 Judicial Selection Commission's rules transfers a list 16 of no more than -- of no fewer than four and no more 17 than six to the Governor. The Governor appoints someone 18 from the list, and the Senate confirms. The appointment 19 process is the legitimate government function that we're 20 talking about.

21 THE COURT: So, in other words, you're 22 saying it's irrelevant that the subsequent and actual 23 appointments have performed legitimately their 24 governmental functions as judges, so you're saying it's 25 just a procedural process of appointments that has been

1 affected not the actual result?

2 MS. AINA: The legitimate government
3 function to which -- for which the Governor invokes the 4 exception is not to assure that the judges who are 5 appointed pursuant to the appointment process do their 6 job. What the function -- the function the Governor is 7 pointing to is the appointment process that the 8 Constitution has said there are three actors for 9 purposes of the appointment process, the Judicial 10 Selection Commission, the Governor, and the Senate. The 11 function that we are referring to is the function
12 described in Article VI, Section 3, of the State

13 Constitution, how -- how judges and justices of the 14 appellate and circuit courts are appointed.

15 And at this point I should point out,
16 your Honor, that while Plaintiffs make -- while they 17 cite both to the Chief Justice's appointing authority
18 and the Governor, I'm here to argue the Governor's 19 reasons or understanding of what his obligations are 20 under 92F with respect to the Judicial Selection 21 Commission's list. I cannot and do not speak for the 22 Chief Justice.

23 But the analysis is with respect to 24 frustration, which is only one of three exceptions that 25 the Governor has raised as justification for

1 nondisclosure, the legitimate government function is the 2 process of appointing judges for the State of Hawaii
3 that the Governor is required to participate in under 4 the Constitution.

5 The third exception that the Governor
6 relies upon is the one that the plaintiffs say is foul
7 ball and on the Governor's behalf -- or for the Governor 8 to make, and that is whether the exception in 92F-13(1)
9 was asserted in the answer as well as in the motion 10 for -- the Governor's motion for summary judgment. At 11 the very end, there is no question that the paragraph 12 the plaintiffs cite to, paragraph one of the answer,

13 does not include a citation to 92F-13(1); however, the 14 exception is conferred in 92F-11 and is actually in our 15 view subsumed within, as I said earlier, the 16 frustration.

17 The argument with respect to frustration
18 that the plaintiffs make as to why it's not available is 19 to say that there's no expectation on the part of 20 nominees or applicants, judicial applicants, to 21 nondisclosure, that they cannot expect to have 22 confidentially -- confidentiality maintained by the 23 governor. And that's a privacy argument. It's an -- 24 when you look at the constitutional history with respect 25 to the judicial selections confidentiality requirements,

1 it's rooted in privacy. It's rooted in a balance
2 between whether someone who applies for public office
3 ought to have confidentiality as against the public's 4 interest in knowing what the applicant is about, what 5 the applicant believes.

6 The balance was tipped by the delegates
7 in 1978 to making everything the Judicial Selection 8 Commission does confidential. The balance was tipped in 9 that direction because attorneys came to the convention
10 and said, Things happen in my law firm, and I may not 11 apply. I've heard of things happening in my law firm, 12 and people have applied and suffered consequences. That 13 is clearly on the -- in the constitutional record.

14 Misgivings were presented to the Constitutional 15 Convention's delegates. When the delegates debated in 16 the committee of the whole, they acknowledged that they 17 heard these things from people who came, and they 18 concluded there needs to be confidentiality in the 19 deliberations.

20 What they couldn't decide upon and they 21 ended up delegating to the Judicial Selection Commission 22 to do was to in fact articulate the extent and scope of 23 that confidentiality. One year later the Judicial 24 Selection Commission adopted what is now Rule 5, 25 section 2, and said everything is confidential.

1 In Pray, the Supreme Court said
2 everything is confidential while it's before the 3 Judicial Selection Commission, but the Judicial 4 Selection Commission as a matter of separation of powers
5 is not the legislature. It cannot tell another branch 6 of government what to do by way of its rule. And so the 7 court concluded there's a vacuum here, and the 8 appointing authority have discretion. That's the 9 holding in Pray. No question.

10 But the Pray court never addressed
11 because it was never asked to address the Uniform 12 Information Practices Act which wasn't in effect. The 13 Pray court --

14 THE COURT: Do you see an analogy to 15 that? I mean --

16 MS. AINA: No. It's an -- it's an 17 independent basis for the Governor's reason -- for the 18 Governor not to disclose.

19 THE COURT: Well, they basically 20 interpreted the JSC Rule 5 or 7 arising from the 21 Constitution in the matter involving separation of 22 powers analysis, and now you're saying under the UIPA 23 statute, it's a statute that it would be different 24 analytically?

25 MS. AINA: What the Governor is saying is

1 that the Legislature is the branch of government that 2 makes law, that while the Pray court concluded that the 3 Judicial Selection Commission had sole authority to 4 regulate itself by its rule, but not to regulate the 5 chief justice in the judicial branch or the governor in 6 the executive branch. What the Pray court did not say 7 was the Legislature was similarly foreclosed. What 8 the -- there was no discussion as to the power of the 9 Legislature under the -- under the Doctrine of 10 Separation of Powers as to whether the UIPA was 11 constitutional.

12 I mean, if the Court is suggesting that 13 the Pray court's decision foreclosed Legislature from 14 making exceptions because of the Doctrine of Separation 15 of Powers, then the Doctrine of Separation of Powers is 16 being misapplied. Under Article III, the Legislature
17 makes the laws. The Legislature made the policy 18 decision that when a confidential document reaches the 19 hands of certainly an executive branch official or 20 agency, that agency or official must maintain the 21 confidentiality of that document. It passed two 22 provisions to ensure that, 92F-13(4) and 92F-19(b).
23 There's no question that the Legislature is fully 24 authorized under the State Constitution to pass those 25 two laws. There's also no question that in the Pray

1 court, the Pray court said the JSC's rule is 2 constitutional. It is a proper rule for the JSC to 3 adopt in order or pursuant to the State Constitution.

4 So what you have here is, for instance,
5 if this Court were to order a -- or to seal a document, 6 that document is sealed if the attorney general -- if 7 the attorney general were present in a proceeding and 8 the Court sealed the document, that document is sealed 9 as to the attorney general and any other law enforcement 10 agency that the attorney general would give the document 11 to for purposes of that law enforcement agency's 12 execution of its duties. So a seal, for instance, on 13 confidential records in a criminal proceeding is not 14 going to keep the records from being transferred to 15 those who need the document in order to do their job, 16 but that second agency under the UIPA cannot lift the 17 confidentiality of this Court's order. Only the Court 18 can lift the confidentiality.

19 So when a statute confers confidentiality
20 on a document or a rule confers confidentiality on a 21 document, which is the case here with Judicial Selection 22 Commission Rule 5, 2, then the receiving agency is 23 obliged under 92F-13(4) and 92F-19(b) to maintain the 24 confidentiality of that record. There's no judgment
25 call in the receiving agency. The Legislature has said

1 specifically no disclosure, and that's the restriction 2 that 92F-11 recognizes to the general rule and the 3 general policy in 92F-2 that the people be allowed to 4 look at government records so they can participate in 5 government.

6 THE COURT: Tough issues.

7 MS. AINA: Thank you.

8 THE COURT: Thank you.

9 MR. THOMAS: Your Honor, I'd like to take 10 a few minutes to respond to those arguments.

11 THE COURT: Yes.

12 MR. THOMAS: Thank you.

13 First of all, your Honor, the Legislature
14 didn't do what the Governor is now arguing that it does, 15 that once an agency treats a document as confidential,
16 that it must remain forever confidential. I mean, 17 that's certainly not what Section 92F-19 says, and we'll 18 walk through that in a minute.

19 And second of all, I think there's a -- 20 by trying to analogize it to -- the JSC list to a 21 document that's been placed under seal by a court, I 22 think that highlights the Governor's misapprehensions
23 about what the duties of an agency are under the UIPA 24 that court sealing documents is a world apart from 25 saying an agency -- and of course the Court is not an

1 agency under UIPA, is not subject to UIPA -- has the 2 obligation to disclose. I mean, the courts are under no 3 obligation to disclose things. Of course we all act in 4 public, but when the situation requires, the Court has 5 the inherent power to go off -- go off the public
6 record, something that certainly that the Governor does 7 not, especially in light of the UIPA.

8 Secondly, and let's take a look at 9 Section 19. It doesn't say what the Governor says it 10 does. It's a prohibition under 19A of disclosure from 11 one agency to another. So it's expressly limited to the 12 Governor can't -- or an agency can't disclose to 13 another, not the public. Here, the public is certainly 14 not an agency that's -- it's the receiving entity. The 15 public itself is the receiving entity, not another 16 agency. And of course it doesn't apply to the JSC since 17 the JSC discloses the list to the Governor pursuant to 18 the Constitution. So if there's any question, of course

19 the constitutional powers of the JSC take precedence 20 over 92F-19(a). So, again, the prohibition is on the 21 disclosure to other agencies. And so the Governor is 22 not being asked to disclose it to another agency. He's 23 being asked to disclose it to the public.

24 Second -- and I think this is what really 25 kicks in -- an agency receiving government records

1 pursuant to subsection A shall be subject to the same
2 restrictions on disclosure of the records as the 3 originating agency. Again, that -- that whole section 4 isn't even applicable here because it's the public 5 that's getting the records, your Honor, and not an 6 agency. And even if it could be construed to apply to 7 the Governor, he did not receive the JSC list pursuant 8 to subsection A. So I think that as a matter of 9 statutory interpretation is sort of the -- the way that 10 you deal with that argument.

11 And if that doesn't do it for you, you 12 can go back and take a look at the Governor's claim that 13 the lists themselves somehow are confidential, and 14 that's a misapprehension of the nature of these things.
15 Now, the lists can be confidential while the JSC has 16 them, and the Supreme Court has ruled that's the case.
17 But government records essentially can change their 18 nature to go from confidential documents to public 19 documents, and so the Governor's obligation is to 20 disclose those unless he can prove those things, that 21 it's either confidential under the exceptions that he 22 relies upon, and let's deal with those sort of seriatim 23 here.

24 First of all, I'm not so sure that on the 25 waiver issue whether the Governor should have raised

1 this issue to give us notice so we could at least be 2 here arguing on a complete record of the privacy claims 3 that we got hit on with the reply on Thursday is the 4 question of whether 92F-11 is sort of the catch-all and 5 doesn't obligate the Governor to give us a little better 6 notice than that than in the reply brief.

7 And so assuming -- let's even assume that 8 privacy was raised as an affirmative defense properly 9 under the notice pleading rules to give us proper notice
10 under Rule 8. Governor still hasn't addressed why it 11 only sort of crops up in a reply brief on the last day 12 before the -- literally before the hearing when we don't 13 have an opportunity to respond, and, in fact, our only 14 remedy is to file a motion to strike. The ICA has ruled 15 in an unpublished case that we couldn't even seek 16 additional briefing. So even a surreply brief or 17 something to that effect is an improper procedure, so we 18 couldn't have even asked for that. The Court is -- the 19 only remedy that we can ask the Court for is the motion 20 to strike, which we filed. And so it's not in the 21 motion for summary judgment. Only shows up in a reply.
22 The Governor hasn't really addressed why under this 23 Court's -- the Circuit Court Rule 8 it's pretty clear 24 that you're not supposed to raise arguments in a reply 25 for the first time.

1 And so, you know, what it really gets 2 down to -- and I think this is sort of the heart of the 3 Governor's argument -- that, you know, I've heard things 4 happening in my law firm. Even if we get over the 5 double and sort of triple hearsay that that might be -- 6 and it is offered for its truth, your Honor. Let's make 7 no mistake about that -- that there's really no basis 8 for this Court to find that the process has been 9 frustrated as a matter of law.

10 If those misgivings were presented to the 11 Constitutional Convention, as the Governor argues, let's 12 look at what the Constitutional Convention did with 13 those misgivings. First of all, it did nothing to the 14 governor. It did not tie his or her hands. It did not 15 tie chief justice's hands. So in reaction to those 16 quote/unquote misgivings, even assuming they were 17 proveable, the Con-Con did nothing, and, in fact, later 18 on except delegate it to the JSC. What did the JSC do?

19 It adopted rules which the Hawaii Supreme Court said in 20 Pray were limited only to the JSC, which makes a lot of 21 sense because it's the JSC's rule to determine its own 22 procedures under the Constitution, and it's the 23 Legislature's function to determine what government 24 records once it leaves the JSC are subject to public 25 disclosure. And in that case, the Legislature has made

1 it quite clear that any kind of close calls, let's go 2 with disclosure.

3 On the privacy issue, if the Court is 4 inclined to address that, it's an immense burden on the 5 Governor's part. I mean, it's simply not a balancing 6 between, oh, is there some privacy interests, and what's 7 the public? It's a clearly unwarranted invasion of 8 privacy, and that's a very high standard.

9 And secondly, let's look at what the 10 Court said in the SHOPO case. It said it must be a 11 significant privacy interest, and it's the name alone -- 12 and we would argue, your Governor, that -- or, your 13 Honor, that someone's name alone, if it's a privacy
14 interest at all, it's very -- I won't say 15 inconsequential, but it's not the type of things when we 16 look in the statute and the legislative history that the 17 Legislature was trying to protect with the privacy
18 interest, things like social security numbers. You
19 know, it's another thing if -- if the JSC list included 20 everybody's resume and background check, for instance.
21 That might be another question. But here, it's 22 literally just limited to their name, and the name alone 23 is not significant. Compare that to the list that we 24 see in the statute.

25 And then, finally, if it's not

1 significant, as the Court said in SHOPO, a mere 2 scintilla -- and that's, as we all know, a very 3 extremely low bar to cross over -- a mere scintilla of 4 public interest will overcome that, and here, in this 5 case, this is an argument that the Governor makes now
6 that even his own OIP has rejected in Opinion 0303, said
7 the public interest clearly outweighs any -- any minimal 8 interest someone might have in essentially their name 9 showing up on a list for government employment.

10 And if that's the case, if the Court is 11 inclined to rule on that issue, we suggest -- we argue 12 that there's -- this is not even a close call, that the 13 public interest clearly outweighs in -- in knowing who 14 might be on those lists and who the other candidates or 15 who the other nominees were who the Governor did not 16 choose to appoint clearly outweighs the minimal privacy 17 interest, if there is one at all, in someone's name.

18 And, your Honor, if you have any 19 questions, I'd be happy to answer them, but other than 20 that, I think we've responded to every question or every 21 issue that's been raised by the Governor.

22 THE COURT: Thank you.

23 MR. THOMAS: Thank you.

24 MS. AINA: Your Honor, one thing for the 25 record, please. On Friday the plaintiff's attorneys

1 raised with us that -- the concern about whether the 2 privacy interest had or exception had been raised for 3 the first time on reply. We did -- and I say this only 4 for the record. We did invite them and indicate to them
5 that we would have no objection to their requesting time 6 to file a surrebuttal or rebuttal to that -- to the -- 7 what they believed was argument presented for the first 8 time. So just for the record I would indicate that.

9 I would also want just two other things, 10 to direct the Court's attention to the excerpts with 11 respect to what was presented to the Constitutional 12 Convention in 1978, to the excerpts from the -- from the 13 constitutional proceedings at page 7 and 8 of the 14 reply -- of the Governor's reply brief.

15 And, finally, I would like to say that 16 this is really the first time that these three 17 exceptions have been presented to a court. There's no
18 question that OIP has addressed them twice, once in a 19 1993 written opinion, which is included in the exhibits 20 to, I think, both of our pleadings and then again in 21 0303 -- opinion 0303 to which counsel just cited. But 22 the courts -- the courts have not addressed these 23 issues. They've not addressed whether, at least in 24 the -- particularly in the context of the Judicial 25 Selection Commission's list, which is of interest to 1 everyone, the courts have not addressed which, if any,

2 exceptions apply to the general rule of disclosure. And 3 so a complete record, consideration to all of the 4 applicable exceptions ought to be given in this Court, 5 and, if necessary, because this is important, by the -- 6 by the Supreme Court of the state of Hawaii. Thank you.

7 THE COURT: Thank you. These are 8 complicated issues, and it will take me a while to go 9 through our findings and conclusions, so let me start at 10 the end.

11 Basically, the Court believes public
12 disclosure is public interest. In that light, the Court 13 would grant Oahu Publications' motions here. The Court 14 believes that the defendant has not shown that 15 exceptions apply in this case.

16 The Court begins with the Uniform
17 Information Practices Act as codified in Chapter 92F.
18 HRS 92F-11, affirmative agency disclosure 19 responsibilities, expressly mandates disclosure in 20 subsection A stating all government records are open to 21 public inspection unless access is restricted or closed 22 by law.

23 An exception to this rule is provided in 24 subsection B which states except as provided in 25 Section 92F-13. Under 92F-13, entitled government

1 records; exceptions to general rule, it states in 2 pertinent part as follows. It states this part shall 3 not require disclosure of, as relevant to the arguments 4 raised here, subsection 1, government records which if 5 disclosed would constitute a clearly warranted invasion
6 of personal privacy; subsection 3, government records 7 that by their nature must be confidential for the 8 government to avoid the frustration of a legitimate 9 government function; and subsection 4, government 10 records which pursuant to state or federal law, 11 including an order of any state or federal court, are 12 protected from disclosure.

13 Thus, the burden is on Defendant to show
14 that his refusal to disclose the list -- nominee list 15 falls within an exception either under HRS 92F-13(3) or 16 92F-13(4). As stated, Defendant has failed to meet the 17 requirements for an exception under 92F-13(3).

18 HRS Section 92F-13(3) provides that 19 disclosure is not required where the government record 20 is of such a confidential nature that disclosure will 21 result in a frustration of a legitimate government 22 function. Article VI, Section 4, of the state 23 Constitution created the JSC to compile a list of 24 judicial nominees. The defendant here argues disclosure 25 of the nominee list will frustrate an application

1 process -- appointment process as it will chill
2 potential applicants from submitting their names.

3 However, based on the Pray case, Article 4 VI, Section 4, cannot serve as a basis for requiring 5 confidentiality. In Pray, a radio talk show host sought 6 public access to various judicial nominee lists. The 7 JSC denied that request citing JSC Rule 7, which is now
8 JSC Rule 5, which requires that the Commission's 9 proceedings be confidential. Pray argued that Rule 7 10 conflicted with Article VI, Section 4, of the 11 Constitution which only required that JSC's
12 deliberations be confidential. The Supreme Court agreed 13 with Pray holding that the term "deliberations" 14 encompasses only those acts, processes, or 15 considerations undertaken prior to final choice or 16 decision. For present purposes, it is the list of 17 judicial nominees that represents the JSC's final choice
18 of decisions. The list itself is not part of JSC's
19 deliberations.

20 Thus, the Supreme Court concluded that 21 Article VI, Section 4, of the Constitution neither 22 expressly mandates that list containing the names of 23 JSC's judicial nominees remain confidential or that they 24 be publicly disclosed. This holding was specifically 25 extended to the governor as the Supreme Court reasoned.

1 It follows that there's no express constitutional
2 obligation imposed on the governor or the chief justice
3 either to disclose the names or to keep them
4 confidential.

5 As the Supreme Court has expressly held 6 that Article VI, Section 4, does not impose any 7 constitutional obligation on the governor either to 8 disclose the names or to keep them confidential, it 9 cannot be said that the judicial nominee list is by its 10 nature something that must be kept confidential.
11 Likewise, Defendant has not adequately shown how 12 disclosure of the list will frustrate the proceedings of 13 the JSC.

14 In this motion Defendant argues that 15 disclosure of the list will have a chilling effect on 16 potential nominees. However, Defendant has failed to 17 substantiate this argument with any evidentiary support.
18 While the theory underlying the argument may be 19 plausible, Defendant has failed to show that such a 20 chilling effect in actuality exists. Defendant has not 21 provided any evidence in the form of affidavits or 22 declarations of potential applicants testifying that the 23 disclosure of the judicial nominee list had any effect 24 on their decision to apply for a judicial vacancy. In 25 light of any actual proof, Defendant's argument of a

1 chilling effect is speculative and cannot support a
2 judicial determination that disclosure of nominee lists
3 will frustrate the selection process as a matter of law.

4 Accordingly, as the Supreme Court has 5 ruled that disclosure of the judicial nominee list is 6 discretionary and given that Defendant has failed to 7 show any real evidence of frustration of a legitimate 8 government function, 92F-13(3) does not apply.

9 Defendant has raised an applicable
10 defense under HRS 92F-19(4). However, this defense is 11 distinguishable, the Court believes, based on the unique 12 facts of this case. Together, 92F-13(4) and HRS

13 92F-19(b) would permit Defendant to withhold access to 14 the judicial nominee list. Under 92F-13(4), government 15 records that are protected from disclosure pursuant to 16 state or federal law are exempted from the requirements
17 of HRS 92F-19(11). Thus, if any other statute or law 18 prevents disclosure of judicial nominee lists, then 19 92F-13(4) would provide an exception to the general
20 disclosure requirements found in 92F-11.

21 92F-19, limitations on disclosure of 22 government records to other agencies, deals with 23 disclosure of government records among government 24 agencies. Subsection B states that any agency receiving 25 government records shall be subject to the same

1 restrictions on disclosure of the records as the 2 originating agency.

3 JSC is bound by the JSC rules which it
4 promulgates pursuant to Article VI, Section 4. JSC
5 Rule 5, Section 2, states under the Constitution of the 6 State of Hawaii, the Commission's proceedings must be 7 confidential. Accordingly, because the JSC, as the 8 originating agency, is bound by the confidentiality
9 requirement of JSC Rule 5 under 92F-19(b), the same 10 should apply to Defendant as the receiving agency.

11 However, the special circumstances here
12 allow for an exception, the Court believes, to 92F-19(b)
13 in this case. Requiring the Governor's office to comply 14 with JSC's rules would directly conflict with the 15 holding in Pray. In Pray, the Supreme Court also 16 specifically examined whether the confidentiality
17 requirement of Rule 7 applied to the Governor and Chief 18 Justice of the Supreme Court after the JSC submitted its 19 list of nominees for selection of judicial appointments
20 or appointees. In finding that the constraints of JSC 21 Rule 7 do not extend to the appointing authorities, the 22 Supreme Court noted that the 1978 Constitutional
23 Convention Committee of the Whole Report No. 10 states 24 that the JSC would have power by way of its own rules to 25 determine its boundaries and limits on the

1 confidentiality of its actions. Thus, the Supreme Court
2 concluded the plain language of the committee report
3 suggests that the framers intended only that the JSC 4 have the power to gag itself and such other persons as 5 might participate in its proceedings.

6 Accordingly, the actions of the Governor
7 and Chief Justice affecting confidentiality and taken 8 after the lists are received would logically fall 9 outside the scope of JSC's rules, and it therefore 10 follows that such actions would be unconstrained by the 11 confidentiality provisions of Rule 7.

12 Furthermore, the Supreme Court held that 13 requiring the Governor or Chief Justice to follow JSC
14 Rule 7 would violate the Separation of Powers Doctrine.
15 Such authority would literally transform the JSC into a 16 fourth coequal and quasi-legislative branch of state 17 government empowered to control and object to its 18 coercive influence, the independent functions, and 19 prerogatives of the heads of the executive and judicial 20 branches. It stated further, it is inconceivable to us
21 that the 1978 Constitutional Convention without comment 22 could have intended such a result. We therefore hold in 23 that Pray case that the confidentiality requirement of 24 Rule 7 does not apply to the Governor of the -- or the 25 Chief Justice after the JSC has submitted its list of 1 judicial nominees for consideration, and that it is 2 within the sole discretion of the appointing authorities 3 whether to make public disclosure of the JSC's list of 4 judicial nominees.

5 Thus, the Pray case stands in direct
6 conflict with a strict application of 92F-19(b) in this 7 particular case. As Pray appears to convey unfettered 8 discretion to the Governor or Chief Justice regarding 9 the disclosure of the nominee list, this would 10 contradict with 92F-19(b) which requires the Governor as 11 an agency receiving a government record to comply with 12 the same restrictions regarding disclosure as the JSC 13 originating agency. This would effectively render that 14 portion of the UIPA illegal.

15 The Court believes there is an exception 16 to 92F-19(b) from the Pray case so that the rule and the 17 Pray case can be read harmoniously. It should be noted 18 that UIPA is a statute that strongly promotes the public 19 interest as it furthers public access to government 20 records and the transparency in government.
21 Additionally, the particular UIPA section in question, 22 92F-19, deals with disclosure among government agencies,
23 and it is highly unlikely that its drafters contemplated 24 an exchange with an agency that represented the highest 25 decision making office of an entire branch of 1 government. Here, that would be the judicial branch and 2 the executive branch making particular nominee 3 decisions.

4 In the majority of cases, it is likely 5 that 92F-19(b) can be implemented smoothly between 6 agencies. What makes the application problematic in 7 this case are the unique facts of this particular 8 situation where we have an executive officer, the Chief 9 Justice, or the -- I mean, the judicial officer being 10 the Chief Justice and the executive officer being the 11 Governor making its decisions -- nominee decisions.

12 Such a situation is extremely rare, so to that extent, 13 for the Court to invalidate the UIPA because of it would 14 be judicially reckless.

15 It's more compelling that the Supreme 16 Court did not have the UIPA before when it made its 17 decision in Pray, as noted by Ms. Aina. Had the Supreme 18 Court been presented with a conflict inherent in 19 92F-19(b) and its analysis regarding the JSC rules and 20 the Separation of Powers Doctrine, it is unclear whether 21 their ruling would be the same, so I don't know.

22 As the Supreme Court's ruling is binding 23 case law, in order to effectuate a harmonious reading of 24 both Pray and 92F-19(b), the Court would create a 25 special exception where 92F-19(b) is applied against a

1 decision made by the Governor or Chief Justice as heads 2 of their respective branches. Under this exception, if 3 the receiving government agency is also again the 4 highest decision maker of that respective branch of 5 government, then 92F-19(b) and only 92F-19(b) requiring 6 a receiving agency to adhere to the same disclosure 7 rules as the originating agency would be inapplicable 8 under the principles of separation of powers as set 9 forth in the Pray case.

10 However, as the exception only applies to 11 92F-19(b), Defendant is still obligated to comply with 12 the rest of UIPA. Such an exception addresses the 13 concern, the Court believes, raised by Supreme Court 14 regarding the scope of JSC's rules and possibility of 15 violating the Separation of Powers Doctrine while 16 simultaneously keeping UIPA intact, so it also comports 17 with intentions of the UIPA drafters as it should be 18 presumed that the Legislature did not intend an absurd 19 result and to rigidly adhere to a narrow reading of 20 92F-19 which forced the finding that the UIPA statute
21 was invalid under Pray.

22 Under this exception that the Court
23 articulates, given the unique circumstances of this case
24 and the Separation of Powers Doctrine, the requirement
25 under 92F-19(b) that Defendant comply with JSC

1 confidentiality rule is obviated. As a result, 2 Defendant cannot rely on 92F-19(b) as a basis for 3 92F-13(4) exception, and 92F-13(4) is no longer 4 applicable.

5 Because Defendant no longer qualifies for 6 any of the statutory exceptions provided under 92F-13, 7 Defendant would be compelled to disclose the list
8 pursuant to 92F-11.

9 Finally, the last and third exception
10 raised by the Governor, the Court does not believe 11 92F-13(1) is applicable also in this case. The Court 12 will begin by noting that Defendant's arguments

13 regarding 92F-13(1) are inappropriately raised in its 14 reply memorandum. Under Rule 7 of the Hawaii Rules of 15 Circuit Court, a reply must respond only to arguments 16 raised in the opposition.

17 In their opposition, Defendant's motions
18 for summary judgment, Plaintiff does not even mention 19 92F-13(1). The statute is never cited nor does 20 Plaintiff make any reference to any kind of argument
21 regarding an unwarranted invasion of privacy. As a 22 result, Defendant's argument regarding 92F-13(1) in his 23 reply are against the Hawaii Rules of Civil Procedure
24 Rule 7 and as well as Hawaii Rules of Civil Procedure
25 8(c) as Defendant failed to plead it as an affirmative

1 defense in the pleadings.

2 Now, it's true that Defendant has 3 mentioned 92F-13(1) in its motion for summary judgment.
4 This does not compel or did not compel Plaintiff to 5 respond to it in its opposition. The Court, in 6 reviewing Defendant's motion for summary judgment, notes
7 that 92F-13(1) is only mentioned as part of its analysis 8 of the entire UIPA statute, never as part of his actual 9 argument applying the facts of this case.

10 Beyond passing references, Defendant's 11 entire argument is broken down into JSC's list was 12 validly withheld under 92F-13 as a frustration of its 13 appointment process, and, two, 92F-13(4) and 92F-19 14 justify withholding JSC's lists because the list is 15 confidential -- is confidential under JSC Rule 5.
16 Clearly, none of the arguments are based on the 17 exception provided under 92F-13(1). Similarly, nowhere 18 in these arguments is there a discussion of significant 19 privacy interest.

20 Now, assuming that Defendant properly
21 raised the -- this privacy argument, the Court will 22 analyze the final exception brought by the defendant.
23 92F-13 states that the disclosure of a government record
24 is not required if it will result in unwarranted 25 invasion of personal privacy. However, 92F-14(a) clarifies that disclosure of a government record shall not constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy if the public interest in disclosure outweighs the privacy interest of the individual.

Subsection B lists a number of examples where an individual has a significant privacy interest. Of these, Defendant has cited 92F-14(b)(4) which states that an individual has a significant privacy interest in information in an agency's personnel file or applications, nominations, recommendations, or proposals for public employment or appointment to a government position. In looking at 92F-14 as a whole as well as (b)(4), the Court notes that the language specifically relates to information relating to various topics, such as information relating to medical treatment, information identifiable as part of an investigation, information relating to eligibility for social services, information in an agency's personnel file or application, nomination, appointments. The Court finds that the intent of the statute is to protect the information of the individual.

This interpretation is supported by the fact that the purpose of 92F-14 is to protect against invasion of personal privacy. Accordingly, under 92F-14(b)(4), it is the personal information in the

1 file, application, nomination, appointment that is 2 intended to be protected, not necessarily the fact that 3 a nomination has been made. Here, the government record
4 that Defendant seeks to protect, the judicial nominee
5 list, to the extent that it does not contain any other 6 personal information, the Court believes that wouldn't 7 be unduly invasive. The judicial nominee list does not 8 contain, as far as the Court understands, any private or 9 personal information, such as addresses, phone numbers, 10 social security, tax information, medical information.
11 Accordingly, the Court finds that 92F-14 is inapplicable
12 to this case as the disclosure of the judicial nominee
13 list does not involve the type of personal information 14 that was intended to be protected by that particular 15 statute.

16 Furthermore, even outside of the examples
17 of 92F-14(b), the Court does not believe that disclosure 18 of the nominee list here would result in a general 19 unwarranted invasion of privacy under 92F-13(1). The 20 Court notes again that the individual privacy interest 21 being weighed here are merely the disclosure of the 22 nominee's names.

23 Additionally, the Court notes that each 24 nominee has voluntarily submitted their name for 25 consideration. In the past, governors and chief

1 justices have released the judicial nominee list. It's 2 difficult to conclude that the applicants even had a 3 reasonable expectation of privacy with that known fact.

4 Given the totality of circumstances, the 5 Court does not find that disclosure of the judicial 6 nominee list constitutes an unwarranted invasion of 7 privacy. Thus, 92F-13(1) would not apply to Defendant 8 in this situation.

9 Given that the defendant has failed to 10 establish the various exceptions asserted, the general
11 rule under 92F-11 applies, and all government records
12 are open to public inspection. Thus, the Oahu

13 Publication motion is granted. And there were three 14 specific parts. To all three the Court would grant the 15 subject motion.

16 MR. THOMAS: Thank you, your Honor.

17 MS. AINA: Your Honor --

18 THE COURT: Yes.

19 MS. AINA: -- may I orally request that 20 the Court allow the Governor -- and I do not know at 21 this point what the response of the Governor would be,
22 but I would like to move for a stay of the Court's order 23 given the importance of the issue, and like the bell, 24 the proverbial bell in its ringing, I would ask that the 25 Court stay the order that you've announced this

1 afternoon or this morning pending an appeal. And I will 2 file a written motion to that effect as well.

3 THE COURT: Well, there is no signed 4 order at this point, so --

5 MS. AINA: Not at this point, your Honor.
6 I make the motion only so that the Court is aware or if 7 the Court is willing to rule orally at this point on the 8 oral motion. I make the motion again because the order 9 when written and filed would be effective and -- and the 10 proverbial bell will have been rung.

11 MR. THOMAS: On that, your Honor, we 12 just -- we actually were going to ask that the Court 13 order that the Governor disclose the list without any 14 further delay. It's been quite a while now, and her 15 remedies seek or the Governor's remedies at this point 16 would be seeking a stay in the Court of Appeals or the 17 Supreme Court, and this case has statutory preference
18 there as well. So, you know, if the judges or justices 19 of the ICA or Supreme Court wants to do that, they 20 certainly can, but there's really no just cause for 21 further delay.

22 THE COURT: I don't see an exigency
23 existing that I depart from the normal procedures, so --

24 MS. AINA: Or -- or, your Honor, if the 25 governor -- I mean, I'm sorry, if your Honor would

1 unequivocally announce denial of the oral motion so that 2 we could proceed under Rule 62 because the Circuit Court
3 has denied stay, then we would make the motion -- 4 obviously, after the final judgment was filed, we would 5 make the motion in the Supreme Court as the rule allows.

6 THE COURT: I think we can wait for the 7 filing of your motion, and I guess it will -- it's a 8 difficult issue, so it would take time to digest 9 whatever it is we said today and --

10 MS. AINA: Well, I guess what I'm 11 suggesting, your Honor, is that if the Court is not 12 inclined to grant a motion to stay, and the Court

13 unequivocally stated that, under Rule 62 we would be 14 entitled to make a motion in the Hawaii Supreme Court or 15 the Intermediate Court of Appeals, I suppose, to ask for 16 the stay directly because we have been denied a stay 17 before the Circuit Court. And that would more 18 expeditiously allow this case to proceed to a final 19 judgment as the -- as 92F contemplates.

20 MR. THOMAS: Not to be presumptuous, your 21 Honor, but if such a motion is made, we'd appreciate the 22 opportunity to respond to it, obviously, and perhaps 23 that just takes us back to the Court's original 24 suggestion of let's do this like the rules allow.

25 THE COURT: Right. why don't you just

1 file the motions, and they'll have a chance to respond.

2 MS. AINA: Very well.

3 THE COURT: Thank you.

4 MR. THOMAS: Thank you, your Honor. And,
5 I'm sorry, one -- we do note that the UIPA does require 6 the issuance of -- or the reasonable attorney's fees, so 7 we ask the Court retain jurisdiction over the case to 8 consider that possibility of that motion.

9 THE COURT: And I guess I'll see a motion
10 from you on that point too.

11 MR. THOMAS: We'll move on it forthwith,
12 your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

14 MS. AINA: Thank you.

15 THE COURT: Is there something else,
16 Mr. Thomas?

17 MR. THOMAS: Your Honor, it sounds like 18 you were reading from a written order. Any of the 19 parties need to prepare anything, or would you like the 20 plaintiffs to prepare an order or that sort of thing, 21 order or judgment?

22 THE COURT: Yes. And you can follow the 23 transcript. I guess that's what most do. It's pretty 24 long.

25 MS. HASTERT: That's what I was going to

1 suggest, your Honor.

2 MR. THOMAS: Yes. We'll do that, your 3 Honor.

4 THE COURT: Thank you.

5 MS. HASTERT: Thank you, your Honor.

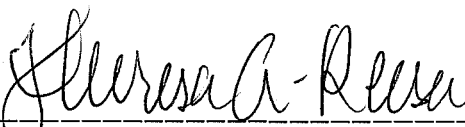

6 MR. THOMAS: Thank you, your Honor.
